

AMERICAN IDOL AND FOX NEWS

On Simon Cowell's last show as a judge on American Idol, my favorite rock stars, Daryl Hall and John Oates, were to perform. Naturally I did two things: 1) emailed all Uline employees encouraging them to watch the show, and 2) switched the channel from Fox News.

Oh my...what's the old saying? "The cream always rises to the top." It was easy to see why Carrie Underwood is a star and, in my opinion, why Daryl and John are way above the crowd. Frankly, I thought the rest of the show was just awful.

The next day at work, a lot of Uline folks told me all about the ins and outs of American Idol. A lot of Americans are just huge fans. Unfortunately, a lot of these folks are the same ones who say that they are too busy or too tired to read the paper or the Internet to know about the political and economic issues of today.

High unemployment, bankrupt states, expensive government programs like healthcare, higher taxes and a relentless global economy make the elections in November very important. All elections should be.

This is just my opinion:

If you are too tired or not interested in knowing "the issues," don't vote. If you do vote, educate yourself to make sure you understand what you're voting for.

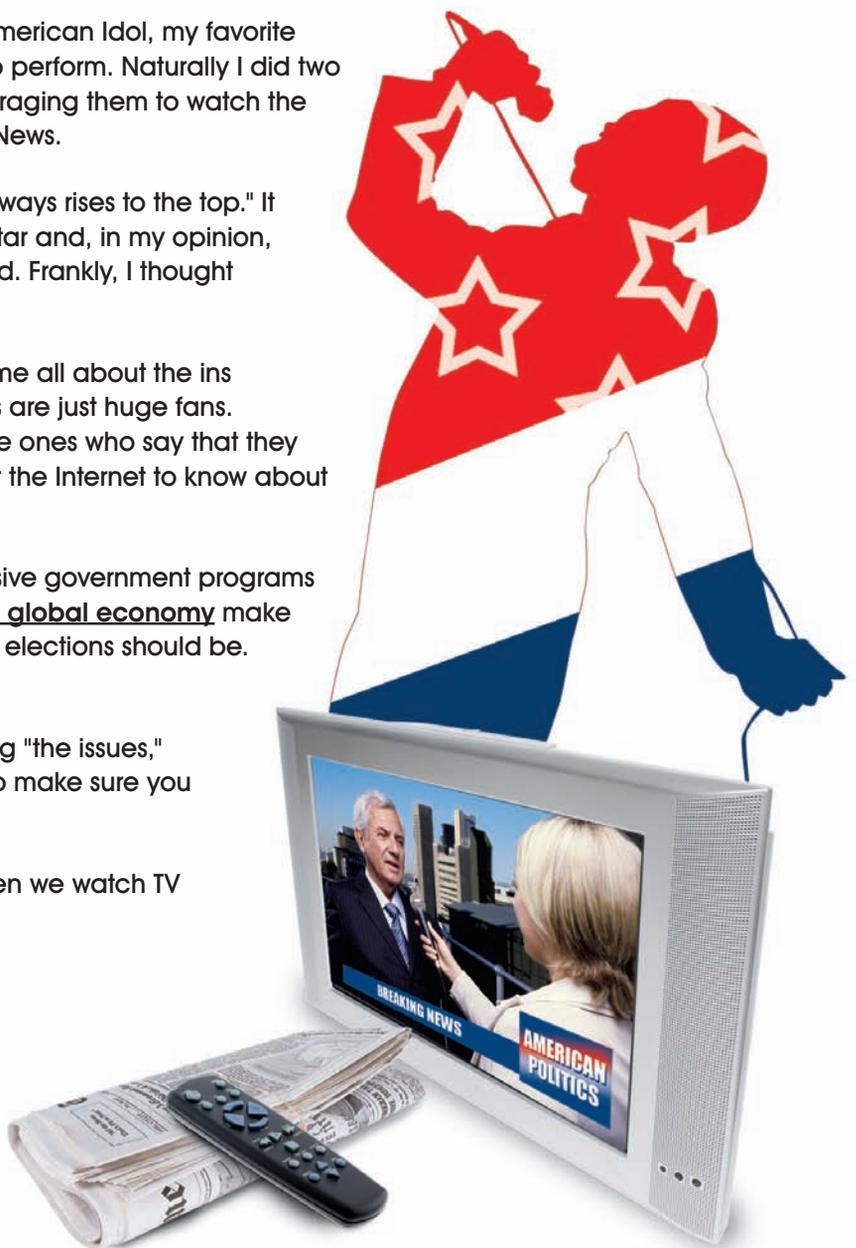

Dick and I love reading newspapers and when we watch TV news, the channel is mostly set on Fox News.
